Love's Reincarnation

*In a world reborn, under the wide and blue skies,
I'd navigate the path to you, where my true heart lies.
Hand in hand, by Henley's sands we'd stroll,
Witnessing dawn's gold and twilight's gentle toll.*

*I'd not bind my heart in haste, nor wear rash rows,
But seek you out, through time's endless bows.
To you, my love, bold and true I'd confess,
Even if rejection nigh my soul undress.*

*Across the turn of seasons, in this life anew,
My oath, unwavering, forever to pursue.
Bathing in the moon's gleam, peaceful and quiet,
I'd unbosom myself, till dream's end sighs in night.*
